The GOSSIP CORNER

By RUTH MONRO AUGER.

HOW YOU CAN TELL. Chili Autumn winds begin to vex the dwellers of town. And so the maidens wear their necks a little lower down.

—James J. Montague.

INTEREST is increasing right along in the exhibits in the woman's achievement department of the coming International Soil Products exposition. Exhibits in any line of work are of wonderful benefit; the inspiration of seeing the accumulated work of a great many people all interested in the same thing is a great good. Then exhibits are valuable in helping to set standards of excellence. A piece of work, whether in the fine arts or the textile, floriculture or culinary line, represents a certain achievement on the part of the worker, and seen alone with nothing else in the same line with which to compare it, may seem to be super excellent, but the question is how will it grade when taken in a class with other people's work? Exhibits help people get their heads.

One of the things that make the eastern art centers what they are is the large number of art exhibits continually being shown that help place the artists as compared with the standards already attained by their fellow workers.

Speaking of artists, a painter friend of mine was once terribly smitten with a very lovely girl, who unfortunately gave him a little about art. He was about to leave the city and in parting he presented the girl with his masterpiece, a really wonderful canvas, in which his splendid ability was represented at its best, a picture that had won for him the highest praise in one of the big art shows. In the gushy little note of acknowledgment the girl said: "Thank you so much for your gift; you know I always was crazy over that frame I don't worry though, he lived through it."

Isn't it interesting to watch people's facial expressions? Some people show in every feature every mood; others have almost masklike faces and rarely change unless under greatly aggravated circumstances. With some people, their eyes give their thoughts away, although the rest of their face is inscrutable and they are just the opposite type, where the eyes are impenetrable; the mouth then is the window to the soul. And with some people, the eyebrows are the signals of their owner's moods. If you want to see someone having a high old time of enjoyment in living without letting on, look upon as the leaders of the society men of the brigade? Why it is that the only time they brighten up and take interest in life is at mail calls. The answer of course, you've guessed it. THE girl has gone back to the University of Texas, to devote her time, thoughts and attention to deep study, while her desperate admirers languish behind.

Dorothy Williams, Helen Stewart, Birdie Krupp and Jane Burger, the ringleaders of fun and sports in their particular set of school girls, are all going to be out of town this coming week and they are most assuredly going to be sorely missed. The rest of the crowd depending upon them, to a great extent to start things, and they were equal to finish everything they started, too. Taking a prominent part in all their school activities with a splendid school spirit, they were the leaders there as well as in the social activities outside of school. Helen and Dorothy have already gone, and Birdie and Jane will be leaving next week.

Katherine Hager was frisking about the other day in a awfully becoming blue frock, with a blue hat of the exact same shade. One dominating color for the costume, and the girl was beautiful to most people and is certainly more pleasant to see than the color medleys some folks deck themselves in.

High school students are in the watchful waiting state for the completion of a street car line which will take them to the city center. The poles marking the way the car track will pass represent all of the street car lines that are in the city. They have to trudge many blocks uphill through the deep dusty road to school. This has a side of real tragedy, too, for how can they keep their eyes from impressing the girl of their latest crush, with his virtues as a dapper model of coming manhood perfection, when he looks like a Charley Chaplin imitation of Alkali Ike by the time he has waded through the dust and landed at school? No wonder they are at the door saying things; those first love affairs are usually much more real and poignant than after they get the habit when they are older.

ALL PREPARATIONS MADE FOR FIREMEN'S FIRST BALL. All arrangements have been perfected for the first annual ball of the local Firemen's Benefit association to be held Thursday night at the Fraternal Brotherhood hall, Overland and Oregon streets.
